All dressed up

Perhaps in conjunction with this week's activities honoring Indians, someone decided to dress this statue of Massasoit up a bit. Massasoit, located west of the Harold B. Lee Library, is the second reproduction of the original statue of Massasoit, which remains at home in Massachusetts.

Reagan discusses U.S.-Soviet talks

Says it's 'high time' for summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, renewing an offer to meet with newly installed Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, said Thursday night it is "high time" for a superpower summit and that there is a good chance it will take place.

Reagan, speaking at his third televised news conference in as many months, appealed to the Democrat-controlled House of Representative to approve funds for the MX missile in a pair of votes next week. "There is little prospect of success" at arms control talks with the Soviets in Geneva without congressional approval for 21 additional missiles, he said.

"No request by an American president for a major strategic system deemed vital to the national security has ever been denied by an American Congress," Reagan added.

On other domestic matters, the president said that when he meets Senate Republican leaders on Friday, he will be prepared to discuss changes in his unpopular fiscal year 1986 budget. But he seemed to rule out canceling next year's Social Security cost-of-living increase, which some senators want.

Reagan also fielded questions concerning South Africa, describing the police shootings of black demonstrators there as "tragic," but he said the racial troubles in that nation result in part from those who want "violence in the streets." Reagan said his policy of quiet pressure against the Pretoria government has eased the apartheid policies of the Pretoria government.

In addition to his desire to engage in a superpower dialogue, the president said the United States is willing to meet with a joint Palestinian and Jordanian delegation to promote peace in the Middle East, so long as the Palestinian Liberation Organization is excluded. But he ruled out direct American involvement in peace talks.

"We are not getting into direct negotiations," he said, but instead, "just going to do whatever we can to help."

Even as he appealed for bipartisan support for his MX missile, Reagan set up a fresh confrontation with Congress when he said he would oppose an extension of federal unemployment benefits for those whose state payments have run out. The federal program will lapse on March 31, and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., appealed to Reagan earlier in the day to support an extension.

The news conference was Reagan's first since Gorbachev became the Kremlin's top ruler last week, and the president used the occasion to declare that there. "I think it's high time that we did this," he said.

Asked what the prospects were for having a summit soon, Reagan said, "Well, I have to think that they should be good."

On other issues President Reagan said:

— He expected the successor to U.S. Trade Representative William E. Brock to continue "leaning on our trading partners for continued lifting of restraints" on U.S. exports. Reagan said he would propose another round of trade negotiations when he attends the economic summit in Bonn in May.

— He was surprised when Britain's Foreign Minister Geoffrey Howe criticized the administration's "Star Wars" anti-missile defense program but wanted to know exactly what Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle said when he chastised Howe.

— The administration has no plans to extend the anti-Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua diplomatic recognition as a government-in-exile. The president reiterated his call for continued U.S. aid to the "contras."

The administration is asking Congress to provide $14 million more in U.S. aid to the rebels.

South African march ends in blood bath

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police fired into a crowd of blacks marching toward a white town Thursday, killing 17 and wounding 19, the government said. It was the bloodiest single incident in a year of racial unrest.

The shootings at Uitenhage, an industrial area outside Port Elizabeth, occurred on the 25th anniversary of the shootings in the black township of Sharpeville, where police firing on a crowd killed 69 blacks and wounded 178.

Louis le Grange, the white government's minister of law and order, said the violence began Thursday morning when 3,000 to 4,000 blacks advanced on a police detachment of 19 men and stoned them, refusing orders to disperse.

Newspapers quoted an unidentified witness as saying, "Police suddenly opened fire. We deny we stoned them."

> "Police suddenly opened fire. We deny we stoned them."

Le Grange said the crowd advanced on police "armed with stones, sticks, petrol (gasoline) bombs and bricks," trying to march from Uitenhage's black township of Langa toward the white area of Uitenhage, near Port Elizabeth on the Indian Ocean coast.

The demonstrators were bound for Kwanobuhle, Uitenhage's other black township, to attend a vigil for three people killed in a clash with police 10 days ago, and had to pass through a white area to get there. Le Grange said they were led by a man dressed in black carrying a brick.

The blacks ignored warnings, he said, and "the police were suddenly surrounded and pelted with stones, sticks and other missiles, including petrol bombs." The commanding officer fired a warning shot into the ground, and when that had no effect his men opened fire, the minister said.

In Sharpeville, south of Johannesburg, and in neighboring townships blacks held boycotts and memorial services on the anniversary of the shootings that brought South Africa's black rights movement to the world's attention on March 21, 1960.

Alfred Nzo, secretary of the exiled African National Congress guerrilla movement, called Thursday's shooting "the massacre in the town of Uitenhage."

He spoke in Lusaka, Zambia.

The toll in Thursday's shooting was the highest in a single incident since August, the start of sporadic rioting that has claimed well over 200 lives.

Engineers prepare to combat increased water flow at dam

By MARK BRADLEY
Universe Staff Writer

Water flow at the Thistle Dam has increased over the past week because of warm weather that has come to Utah.

"The snow pack has slowly begun to melt over the past week, causing an increase in water flow along the Spanish Fork River," said Doyle Winterton, Utah County water engineer.

The increase in water flow is not serious yet, but could become dangerous depending upon the amount of precipitation Utah Valley gets between now and June, Winterton said. The warm weather and the speed of the snow melt will also be a factor.

> "The snow pack has slowly begun to melt over the past week, causing an increase in water flow along the Spanish Fork River."

Thistle is still a dangerous place because of the earth movement in the area, according to Clyde Naylor, Utah County engineer.

The county engineer's office is continuing to study the Thistle slide so that it will be able to predict future dangers and understand present conditions in the area, Naylor said.

The Spanish Fork River is currently being dredged to allow the flow of water to run smoothly, said Winterton.

"We are trying to get the river back into the condition it was in before the initial slide."

The county engineer's office has been involved with Thistle since the slide first came down, said Naylor. The state engineer's office, however, has been the department responsible for Thistle upkeep so far.

The state is currently working toward Utah County assuming total responsibility for the Thistle Dam, Naylor said. The county engineer's office and county officials don't want to see the change in responsibility occur until the state makes some changes to improve Thistle's manageability.

"The Thistle problems have not been solved, and the situation is actually worse than before the slide came down," Naylor said.

The state has recently finished the last improvement project on the Thistle tunnel, which is an extension on the spillway, he said. Any further projects to improve the area will only come through requests to state officials.

Both Naylor and Winterton have worked together to compile a study which will help explain Thistle's current situation. The study, entitled "The Thistle Potential," will be sent to state officials to enlist action to improve dangers still present in the area, Naylor said.

Soviet diplomat assassinated in New Delhi by motorcyclists

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Two men on a motorcycle roared up beside a Soviet diplomat's car Thursday and pumped several shots through the right rear window, killing him instantly, police reported. His wife, with whom he had been shopping, and his driver were slightly hurt by flying glass.

Police identified the diplomat as V. Khitzichenko, 48, a senior engineer in the Soviet Embassy's Economic Affairs department. Embassy spokesman Vladimir N. Tsatsyn confirmed the identification, but in response to later telephone calls the embassy refused to give the victim's first name or answer questions.

The attack on Khitzichenko was the latest in a series of killings or attempted killings of foreign diplomats in India over the past three years.

Police Commiseioner Suryakant S. Jog said that after the driver stopped the car, "the motorcyclists . . . pumped a couple of more rounds from the side and the front." He described the assassins as in their 20s and of unknown nationality.

Thakur Jagdish Singh, chief officer of a district police station, said the two men fired at least six shots from automatic pistols.

Jog said Khitzichenko was hit four times. His wife, Nina, 43, and the driver were slightly injured by flying glass and treated briefly at a hospital, Jog said.

> No group claimed responsibility for the assassination and the motive was not immediately clear.

Deputy Police Commissioner B.K. Gupta reported that "witnesses said they (the assassins) were not Europeans."

No group claimed responsibility for the assassination and the motive was not immediately clear, Jog said.

The commissioner said the Khitzichenkos, who have a son, had been in New Delhi for two years and were returning to their home in the embassy compound when the attack occurred at about noon.

Police are conducting a nationwide search for another Soviet diplomat, Igor Gezha, who disappeared last Sunday while jogging in a New Delhi park. Gezha, 37, was a third secretary in the embassy's information department.

India has admitted many refugees from the Middle East and southwest Asia, and terrorist activity has been a growing problem in recent years.

Khitzichenko was the second foreign embassy official killed in five months. British diplomat Percy Norris was shot to death in November while riding in a car in the Arabian Sea port of Bombay.

Bangerter calls Utah's chances of getting plant a 'long shot'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Chances Utah will land a General Motors automobile plant amount to a "bit of a long shot," but 6,000 new jobs will be the prize if the Beehive State wins out over 39 other states, Gov. Norm Bangerter said Thursday.

During his monthly news conference the governor said he had been told by GM executives in Detroit Wednesday that a decision on the Saturn Corp. plant's location could come by year's end.

"They're on the fast track. I think you'll see a decision within a year or so," said Bangerter, who headed the delegation that was the last of 40 to make its pitch to GM.

The plant would produce small cars GM plans to build to compete with Japanese imports, the governor said.

However, Bangerter outlined Utah's assets to GM executives as "our people, lifestyle and our educational system."

But he acknowledged the state's chance of getting the plant was "a little bit of a long shot."

On other matters, the Republican governor said Utah is supporting Nevada's attempt to gain more time for study of the proposed federal high-level nuclear waste repository. He also said the state could offer only moral support for keeping its own major sports franchise and patted the Legislature on the back for its work during the recently concluded 45-day session.

Sites in Nevada, Texas and Washington were picked by the federal Department of Energy as the prime candidates for the repository, while Utah's Davis Canyon site was designated an alternate possibility.

However, Bangerter said DOE officials have assured him that Utah is out of the running for the repository.

"Everything we have been able to learn from Washington is that we're not going to be considered further. But we are not assuming that is the case," he said. "(The repository) is not a major threat to Utah."

Bangerter has said he opposes placing the dump in Utah.

The governor was asked what the state could do to ensure that the Utah Jazz of the National Basketball Association remains in Utah. Bangerter, who met with Jazz co-owner Sam Battistone on Tuesday, ruled out any sort of state appropriation aimed at keeping the franchise in Salt Lake City.

"He's going to have to make an economic decision," Bangerter said of Battistone. "It's moral support at this point; nothing formal. We just want everyone to know we are supportive."

Although he vetoed five bills passed by the Legislature for constitutional and philosophical reasons, Bangerter said lawmakers "did very well."

"They did some things I don't agree with, but on the balance, they did a good job," he said.

Economic growth slows down in 1985

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic growth slowed to a surprisingly weak 2.1 percent during the first three months of the year, while one measure of inflation spurted to its highest level in almost three years, the government reported Thursday.

The Reagan administration and many private economists called both statistics misleading, contending that the economic expansion is more robust and inflation far less of a menace than the Commerce Department figures seem to indicate.

Other analysts were less optimistic, warning that the unexpected weakness could translate into climbing unemployment rates as domestic industries lose further sales to a flood of foreign imports.

All sides agreed that the department's estimate of growth in the gross national product — the total output of goods and services — was much lower than the 4 percent rate that had been widely expected for January through March.

23 Lebanese killed during Israeli attack

ANKOUN, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers smashed through several Shiite Moslem villages in south Lebanon on Thursday in a hunt for guerrillas. At least 23 people were reported killed, including two Lebanese filming for CBS News.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said 21 guerrillas were killed and large quantities of arms, including mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and explosives, were seized in raids on the villages of Houmine al-Tahta, Srifa and Jbaa.

A cameraman and a soundman working for CBS News were killed by a tank shell as they filmed the Israeli raid. CBS in New York identified them as cameraman Tafik Ghazawi and soundman Bahije Metni, both Lebanese, and said they were killed by Israeli fire.

In a protest to Israel, CBS said a third employee, a driver, was critically injured by what "eyewitnesses call an unprovoked and deliberate attack by Israeli forces."

Report on explosion still not finished

ALTA, Utah (AP) — Investigators need more time to collect evidence before releasing a report on last week's fatal explosion at the Goldminer's Daughter ski lodge, but there is no indication when the report will be released, says Alta Mayor William Levitt.

He canceled a news conference scheduled Thursday to discuss findings in the investigation of Friday's explosion that destroyed a three-story wing of the ski lodge, killing two people.

"It's a very complicated thing because of the size and dimension of the destruction that took place," Levitt said. "It's not been an easy investigation for them."

Levitt said the investigating team — including state, Salt Lake County and Alta experts — told him they are unsure when their report will be released.

"I've asked them that question and they cannot give me an answer at the moment," he said.

Meanwhile, Louise Wiens, a 12-year-old Hartland, Wis., girl injured in the blast, was released Wednesday from St. Mark's Hospital in Salt Lake, said Georgia Avery, hospital spokeswoman.

CBS cameraman killed in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Lebanese cameraman working for CBS News was killed Thursday in south Lebanon when a shell landed close to where he was filming, CBS officials here confirmed.

The victim was identified as Toufic Ghazawi, about 46.

Walid Harati, CBS bureau manager in Beirut, said Ghazawi was killed in the village of Kfar Melki.

Solidarity vital to world peace, Venezuelan diplomat says

By BECKY ELGAAEN
Universe Staff Writer

Economic and political problems can be solved by solidarity worldwide, said Manuel J. Sosa, consul-general of Venezuela to Houston, Texas.

"We are faced with an extremely serious situation today," said Sosa. The amount of foreign debt in developing nations is so overwhelming that its consequences affect their very political and social stability, he said.

There is an urgent need to understand and substantially alleviate the third world's foreign debt. "The developing nations capabilities are so limited in this area that whatever measures they enact could unleash political and social traumas," Sosa said.

The situation in developing countries has worsened, he said, because the recovery of the economically most powerful countries takes place to a large extent at the expense of economically weaker countries.

"In addition to the economic crisis, we are witnessing a breakdown in communications, intransigence and uncompromising attitudes."

He said the world is in a process where certain powerful countries are avoiding dialogue before negotiations. "This can result in something we all wish to avoid — confrontation."

The responsibility falls on all of us to lay the foundations for a better future, said Sosa. "Developing countries wish to share that responsibility."

Sosa said it is obvious that industrial countries with internal problems are much better able to cope than developing countries. "The answer lies in working together, in solidarity.," he said.

"If it were possible to probe the opinions of men and women all over the world, we would undoubtedly find the great majority would condemn the confrontation dividing the world community today," said Sosa.

"I believe that there are those interested in peace, but we must all know that there are those interested in war," he said.

The two poles of power which are attempting to divide up the world for themselves manifest the moral bankruptcy of our times. "The lust for power returns with its eternal message of misery and uncertainty," he said.

Sosa explained that three years ago Venezuela had no need to work. They were rich with no real tax system. Now we realize that we have to contribute and work together as a country, he said.

The Venezuelan government is developing systems to eliminate the economic and political problems. "We have chosen the democratic system because of its great potential. We are convinced that no other system can guarantee with so much integrity the aspirations and development of the human being," said Sosa.

He said Venezuela has a strong commitment to the United States and an appreciation of its vital achievements in international affairs.

Staff with business know-how key to political campaigning

By SHERRIL SPRUANCE
Universe Staff Writer

There are great opportunities for good business-minded people to rise to the top in politics, said the former secretary of the U.S. Treasury in a speech Thursday.

Angela Buchanan Jackson, who was also national treasurer for the Reagan-Bush 1984 campaign committee, spoke about her experiences on political campaigns and in government.

"There is a great deal of need for business-minded people on political campaigns," she said. "Campaigns have the same needs as a business and it is important to have someone who knows something about accounting."

However, campaigns differ from businesses because in a campaign, if something isn't working, it goes. She gave an example of a commercial made to emphasize Reagan's position on the importance of military strength. When the opportunity to negotiate with the Soviets came up, the commercial was thrown out.

A business wouldn't do that, she said. It would do research, plan and if it were necessary they would make a change much later because of the money involved.

"The bottom line is winning the election, not how much money is left at the end of the campaign," she said, "so things move faster."

A good business manager can prevent unnecessary campaign spending. She told the story of a campaign worker who wanted to spend $5,000 on a desk for a campaign receptionist which would promote a "presidential" image.

"If there hadn't been a good business manager to catch it, the desk probably would have been bought when it wasn't necessary," she said. "Later, people would be wondering why they had gone over budget."

A well-organized business structure can make the difference between winning and losing an election, she said. In the 1980 election, the race with Carter was very close. At the very end, the Reagan campaign had the money to spend which could have been what swung the election in their favor.

When she was named by President Reagan to be secretary of the U.S. Treasury she went from a camp where decisions were made very fast to one where it was almost impossible to get decisions implemented.

One favorite line used to refuse to implement decisions was "but it's never been done this way before," she said. It was also almost impossible to get someone fired.

"A lot of people in government are just plain crooks," she said. "I could tell by looking at them and I would think my mother didn't raise me to work with people like this. But finding a way to fire them could be difficult."

Neal resigns post as chairman of ASBYU elections committee

The ASBYU elections committee chairman resigned Thursday from his position.

Randy Neal resigned, said Rob Miller, ASBYU president, because the bulk of his job has been completed. Neal would be needed only if election results were being contested, he said.

"Randy will be graduating in April and he said he needs to resurrect his grades," said Miller.

"Neal made a tremendous commitment to the elections committee. He gave a lot of time and energy.

The Universe wrote that Neal should be commended and we (the executive council) agree. He did a great job," said Miller.

Y anthropology professor experiences Iroquois life

By PAUL GAPPMAYER
Universe Staff Writer

When people think of anthropologists, many have preconceived impressions of old gray-haired men hanging out in dark corners of libraries, going over old books and manuscripts.

Dr. Merlin Meyers, a professor of anthropology at BYU, is not the typical stereotype. He believes in going out into the field to do research.

He said field research offers anthropologists much exciting experience. "Experience that can expand your soul."

Meyers, who spent three years in field research among the Iroquois Indians in Ontario, Canada, said field research was the most important technique he could use to study the social structure of the Iroquois people.

Meyers in his research wanted to follow up on a study that anthropologist Lewis Henry Morgan had made of the Iroquois more than 100 years ago.

Meyers and his wife obtained permission from the Iroquois Council of Chiefs to live among the Iroquois on the Six Nations Reservation, located 10 miles south of Hamilton, Ontario.

They were able to move into an old vacant house on the reservation. The house did not have running water or indoor plumbing as none of the homes on the reservation had these conveniences and Meyers wanted to live and be a part of the Iroquois' total lifestyle.

During the Revolutionary War the Iroquois fought on the side of the British. When the war ended and the British were defeated the Iroquois lands were being occupied by the colonists who had been their enemies and the Iroquois did not want to live with them. So they followed the British into Canada where they were given 1,200 square miles of land on which to live. Today the reservation is only 70 square miles because squatters had moved onto parts of their lands which forced the Iroquois to shorten their boundaries.

During Meyers' field research he was able to observe the customary behavior of the Iroquois and how they were able to work out and express their relationships in society, he said.

"When you observe the customs of another culture, the people of that culture want to observe you and the things that you do. You want them to get used to you also," Meyers said.

Many times when an anthropologist first undergoes field research, he runs into culture shock. At first, Meyers said he would get so involved observing a custom that he would not know what to do with himself, he said. "After a while you get involved and you understand what is going on."

The Iroquois have many ceremonies and festivals which are a part of their lifestyle. Meyers arrived in time to witness their strawberry festival. Their festivals usually take place in what is called a "long house," a building about 120 feet long.

Social orders are very explicit during the ceremonies, he said. The men all sit on one side of the long house, and the women all sit on the other.

It being Meyers' first experience with Iroquois ceremonies, he did not know what to expect and was a little nervous because his wife was not able to sit with him.

Outside he heard a shrill war cry and several men in costumes came in and started dancing around the room.

During his first few months Meyers encountered many new experiences which had an effect on him, he said.

It was strange for him to see women delivering their own babies and people who had terminal illnesses wasting away more and more each day because they did not believe in using medicine.

"It is important for anthropologists to stay one to three years with the culture they are studying because many cultures have a special cycle of life which turns every year," he said. "The anthropologist must see this cycle of life at least once, and two or three times is even better."

There are many methods used by anthropologists to study the different cultures. Participation observation is probably one of the best ways to study a culture, Meyers said.

It was important to Meyers to participate and interact with the Iroquois so he could better understand their lifestyles. He participated with the Iroquois in their dancing, digging graves and in many other ways.

He said he was not just curious about what they did, but seriously wanted to do what they did. "Sometimes you will encounter things you are not supposed to, so you can see the culture from the inside out.

"Anthropologists must make concrete accounts of the things they observe. It is important that you make maps, charts and tables to illustrate your findings."

Meyers quoted noted anthropologist E.E. Evans-Pritchard as saying, "The anthropologist at the time of his leaving will feel he has failed, unless there is the sorrow of parting on both sides."

Meyers said at the time of his leaving he experienced a very touching scene with the entire Iroquois community.

After his field research Meyers came to learn that the Iroquois live with more mutual contact with human existence than people who live in an industrialized society, he said.

4.5 million couples experience infertility

By STEVEN J. HANSEN
Senior Reporter

Approximately 15 percent of the married couples in the United States experience some degree of infertility — roughly 4.5 million couples.

Most of these couples have an inability either to achieve pregnancy after a year of unprotected intercourse or to carry pregnancies to a live birth, according to the Serono Symposia, U.S.A., an organization designed to offer medical education to both physicians and couples.

There are tests available to determine infertility and the latest treatments from vitro fertilization (test tube baby) to Pergonal, an extract from the urine of postmenopausal women to effect ovulation.

Although helpful, the medical advancements which aid infertile couples mean time, money and commitment. Tests needed to diagnose a patient's condition can run anywhere from $25 to $125. If surgery is necessary, costs can run as high as $5,000.

For example, Clomid, a drug designed for women to activate ovulation, costs $3 a pill. A doctor can prescribe five to 25 pills a month for three to six months to determine whether pregnancy will ensue.

More complex methods result in still more time and money. Vitro fertilization costs $3,000 a shot and yields only a 15 percent chance of pregnancy.

"It does not take long to run up quite a bill," said Dr. Robert Richards, whose practice includes helping infertile couples.

"Many insurance policies have exclusion clauses for infertility. Couples are stuck between a rock and a hard place."

A national non-profit agency called Resolve, Inc., was founded in 1973 to work as a counseling, referral and support system for infertile couples.

Often members and non-members of Resolve participate in "sharing meetings." The idea behind the meeting is simple: participants exchange and share their feelings about infertility.

"Infertility has been compared to a grieving process except there is nobody to prepare and no support. The problem is real to you, but to people around you, it is not real," said Kim Bell, the president of Resolve of Utah chapter, in explaining the need for a Utah chapter.

"People think all Utahns are Mormons so they all have lots of babies. There's a lot of social pressure. One woman came up to a recent bake sale and said, 'People in Utah can't have babies?' They don't take it seriously."

Even though the organization is national, Bell said the problem is magnified in Utah because of cultural considerations.

"While growing up, there is always the illusion of having a baby, then it just doesn't come. In Utah some girls get married early with mothering and marrying top priorities; they don't make plans for anything else" and the problem is intensified, she said.

Helping Orphans and Parents Everywhere, Inc., suggests to infertile couples the option of adoption. The organization is not an adoption agency; it is a support group "working to make adoption visible and possible," as reported in its newsletter.

A pamphlet distributed by Sereno Symposia, U.S.A., is replete with medical phrases and anatomical descriptions to aid people in understanding infertility; fortunately, it is equipped with a glossary for newcomers.

Yankee tourist crosses river; gets arrested by Communists

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The government of Laos Thursday released an American tourist who was arrested after he unsuspectingly swam across the Mekong River from Thailand to Laos, a Thai immigration official said.

Jon Robert Phillips, 26, of Rumson, N.J., crossed the Mekong River back into Thailand's Nong Khai provincial town on a passenger ferry, the official said in a telephone interview.

Ewing & Co. trip Loyola; Sooners, Memphis St. win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Top-ranked Georgetown, once again led by All-American Patrick Ewing, continued its drive toward a second straight NCAA basketball championship by defeating No. 14 Loyola of Chicago 65-53 Thursday night in the East Regional semifinals.

The 7-foot Ewing scored 14 of his 21 points in the second half and the Hoyas used their relentless defensive pressure to overtake free-wheeling Loyola, which led 28-26 at halftime.

Georgetown snapped the nation's longest winning streak at 19 games by shutting down Loyola star Alfredrick Hughes, the second-leading scorer in the nation. Hughes, who had been averaging 26.9 points per game and had scored in double figures in 94 straight games, picked up three early fouls and was held to just eight points.

Next in line for Georgetown will be No. 6 Georgia Tech, which used a second-half burst to beat No. 12 Illinois 61-53 in the other East semifinal in Providence, R.I. That game will be Saturday.

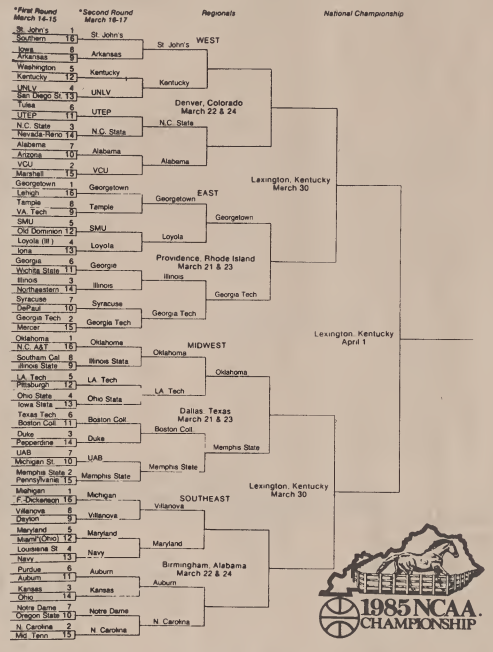

Also Thursday night, Andre Turner hit a 17-foot jump shot with one second remaining to boost No. 5 Memphis State over Boston College 59-57 in a Midwest Regional semifinal in Dallas.

In the other Midwest semifinal, All-American Wayman Tidale's short jump shot bounced on the rim five times before falling throught the basket with two seconds remaining in overtime to give No. 4 Oklahoma an 86-84 victory over No. 8 Louisiana Tech. Memphis State and Oklahoma will meet Saturday.

On Friday night, Maryland faces Villanova and No. 7 North Carolina takes on Auburn in the Southeast Regional semifinals in Birmingham, Ala., while No. 16 North Carolina State plays Alabama and No. 3 St. John's meets Kentucky in the West Regional semifinal in Salt Lake City.

Ewing limped off the court with 1:25 left in the first half with an ankle injury. But he returned in the second half and was his usual dominant force with this rebounding and shot-blocking, as Georgetown, the Big East Conference tournament champion, won its 14th straight game and improved to 33-2.

Turner's game-winning shot for Memphis State came after a Boston College turnover in the final seconds. Boston College had controlled the ball for nearly two minutes and called two timeouts with 14 seconds left to set up a potential winning shot. But Roger McCready dribbled the ball off his foot and it was recovered by Memphis State's Vincent Askew, who fed Turner.

Y baseballers drop two more at Las Vegas

The BYU baseball team could not break the .500 mark as it dropped both games against UNLV in Wednesday's doubleheader.

Cougar pitching ace Mark Beavers is the only BYU hurler who recently can pitch with any consistency. He is also the only Cougar pitcher with a winning record, 4-1.

In the second game of the doubleheader, the Cougars were tied 6-6 going into the bottom of the seventh. With two outs, Cougar relief pitcher Carl Keliipuleole couldn't get the final out as UNLV added another run to win the game 7-6.

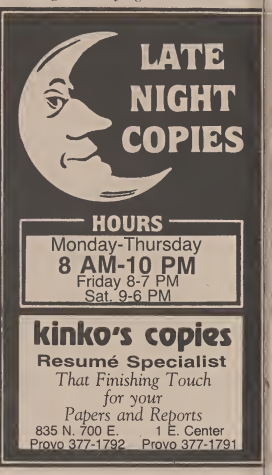

There were some bright spots in the game as Cougar centerfielder Gary Cooper broke his hitting slump with a 3-3 performance at the plate.

In the first game the Cougars lost 10-8. The Cougars had to use three pitchers in the game. Ron Masino, Dave Jenkins and Dave Shaw all saw limited action on the mound as the Rebels belted out 17 hits off the Cougar pitching.

Dixie in 'final four'

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Averian Parris scored 15 second-half points as Dixie Colleg warded off a determined Erie, N.Y., Thursda night to post an 83-75 win in the quarterfinals of th winners' bracket of the National Junior Colleg Athletic Association men's basketball tournament.

Parrish finished with 19 points for the Uta team, 33-1, which will meet Midland of Texas in semifinal game Friday night.

Tar Heel coach doesn't like draw

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Coach Dean Smith of seventh-ranked North Carolina doesn't care for the draw his Tar Heels were given in the NCAA basketball tournament.

"First we draw Notre Dame on its home court and now we have to play Auburn in Alabama," Smith said. "There are some other teams I would rather us play."

The Tar Heels kept alive their hopes for a 10th appearance in the Final Four last week when Kenny Smith dunked the winning basket with three seconds to play following a turnover in a 60-58 triumph over Notre Dame.

Carolina meets Auburn in the regional semifinals at 8:40 p.m. MST today in the night cap of a doubleheader at the Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center.

Villanova and Maryland collide in the 5:07 p.m. opener, with the two winners meeting Sunday for the regional title and a spot in the Final Four at Lexington, Ky., the following weekend.

"Auburn is a very quick team which can play with anybody," Smith said.

"Plus, (Auburn Coach) Sonny Smith has announced his resignation and his players are really going all out for him. I don't like facing that situation."

Carolina, 26-8, is a slight favorite over the 21-11 Tigers, who have reeled off seven victories in a row —four of those coming in the Birmingham arena two weeks ago when Auburn won its way into the National Collegiate Athletic Association tourney by capturing the Southeastern Conference tournament.

"The main thing is they have a winning streak in Birmingham," the Carolina coach said. "It will be a real challenge for us."

Smith, who has a 550-164 record in 24 seasons, steered the Tar Heels to a share of first place in the regular season Atlantic Coast Conference race and finished second to Georgia Tech in the league's post-season tourney.

The Tar Heels own the only national championships among the four teams in the regional, having won it in 1957 and 1982.

Seeded second in the region, Carolina became the team to beat when Villanova upset top-seeded and second-ranked Michigan 59-55 last weekend.

Auburn has become a Cinderella team in the NCAA by knocking off Purdue 59-58 and Kansas 66-64.

Intramural participants battle in tournament action

By FRANK MONTOYA Jr.
Universe Sports Writer

Juliet Taylor goes inside for a shot in women's intramural action. Intramural basketball teams are currently involved in tournaments of their own.

It's tournament time for a bevy of intramural sports and nowhere is this more evident than on the basketball courts of the Smith Fieldhouse and Richards Building.

Nightly, the sounds of basketballs bouncing and tennis shoes squeaking on gleaming courts signal to passers-by that the intramural basketball tournament is in full swing.

This year approximately 460 teams in four divisions are competing for the right to be called the best in their classes. Lora Hincheliff, a junior majoring in recreation management, said teams were placed in divisions according to the way they played during the regular season. "Division rankings were based on each team's performance as it was rated by a supervising official."

In basketball, as well as in other BYU intramural sports and activities, the competition levels are designated 1A, 2A, 3A and 4A. The 4A level is usually the toughest of the four while 1A is rarely used. This year, however, because of the large number of entries in the basketball tournament, there are about 30 teams in the tournament's lowest division.

According to Hincheliff, great care is taken to place each team in a division equal to its skill level. "Occasionally, however, a few teams contest their rankings."

"Usually, it is because they think they've been ranked too highly."

To contest a ranking a team must fill out a complaint form — obtainable at the Intramurals Office — and list the reasons for objecting to the placement. Upon receipt of the form, a graduate assistant in the Intramurals Office and supervisors who have watched the team play evaluate the complaint and make a judgment, she said. The process is the same for any intramural activity.

Most teams, however, are content with their rankings.

Kelvin Nokes, a senior from Riverton, Utah, majoring in business finance, wanted to be ranked 3A. "We have the potential to beat anyone," he said. "In the 3A division, the competition will be good for us. The accomplishment gained from beating good teams is fulfilling."

> "It's fun and a good diversion from school work. Playing in the tournament adds to that excitement."
>
> — Kelvin Nokes

Nokes said participating in intramurals is a great experience. "It's fun and a good diversion from school work. Playing in the tournament adds to that excitement."

Intramurals, however, is more than just fun and games. It has quality too.

Referees, for example, have to be certified before they can officiate a contest, said Hincheliff. "During the season we did a ranking on the referees and listed the best ones as tournament referees. Only those on the list can officiate during the tournament."

In men's basketball each team is responsible for arranging for and paying its officials. In women's basketball and other intramural activities, the Intramurals Office provides and pays for each team's officials.

For non-basketball lovers, other intramural tournaments which are currently underway are ping-pong, tennis, wrestling and chess. Rankings for these tournaments are usually determined by pre-tournament qualification.

California groups interested in Jazz

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Utah Jazz President David Checketts is in California this week to meet with four groups interested in buying or investing in the National Basketball Association club, he said.

Three of the groups, he said, were interested in investing in the limited partnerships the Jazz has said must be sold to keep the team in Utah.

The fourth group is interested in buying the Jazz and moving it to Orange County, Checketts said after flying here Wednesday.

The Orange County group has expressed an interest in building an 18,000-seat arena in Santa Ana, he said.

Checketts and Jazz owner Sam Battistone met last week with Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich, who wants to bring an NBA team to Minneapolis.

"Meeting with the governor doesn't show evidence that there's the dollars and resources and energy to buy the team. It just shows you've got a politician who's interested," Checketts said.

The backcourts could be key in tourney clash

DENVER (AP) — The backcourts are the soft underbellies of both teams, and that's where North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano believes today's NCAA tournament game with Alabama will be decided.

"These are two teams that usually play well up front," said Valvano, "so maybe the key to this game is which backcourt plays better.

Battle of the bulge theme of play; 'Til the Fat Lady Sings' premieres

By ARLENE SHUTT
Universe Staff Writer

"Til the Fat Lady Sings" was an enormous hit with Thursday's opening night audience as the Margetts Arena Theater bursts at the seams with laughter.

The play begins when Jenny, formerly a fat girl, returns home for her 10-year high school reunion with a new, slender body. Her family, expecting a whale, is stunned at her new appearance. They've been praying she won't be bigger than a size 18 ½. While they accept her new look, she still perceives herself as fat. "I may weigh 125 pounds, but inside I'm still an ugly, fat slob," she said.

Throughout the play, Jenny, played by M. Susan McMurray, constantly battles with her alter-ego, who is the heavy person she was before. Her alter-ego is forever tempting her to indulge in junk food. "After all, without sugar, the oreo cookie is a teaspoon of lard between two doggie biscuits," the fat lady reasoned.

A counterpart to Jenny is her sister Diane, played by Lori Marshall. As a former prom queen, Diane admits to having vanity ingrained into her. Because of her good looks and shapely figure, she has never had time to develop a personality. "I'd kill myself if I was ever as gargantuan as you," she told Jenny. "But being fat made you a nice person."

M. Susan McMurray argues with her alter-ego Mendy Wood during a scene from Thursday night's performance of 'Til the Fat Lady Sings.' The play will run through April 5 in the Margett Arena Theater.

THEATER REVIEW

Excited that she will no longer have to buy her daughter's clothes in maternity shops, Jenny's mother Jackie wishes she could have been there to see her daughter lose weight. "I could have weighed and measured you every week like I used to," she said. Jackie, played by Laurie Harrop, insists that the family not use the 'f' word (fat) around Jenny. Jenny later admits that part of the reason sh lost weight was to get revenge on her mother who was continually counting every calorie Jenny ate.

Jenny's brother Greg, played by Greg Burden, is a writer who spends most of his time watching TV game shows. He is thrilled with his sister's new look. "You look good enough to set-up with some of my friends," he said.

The entire family is ecstatic when they discover there's a man in Jenny's life, even if he is an architect who designs prison cells. Their relationship is threatened when Jenny's alter-ego convinces her that this man is out to rip her heart out. In an attempt to scare him away, Jenny shows him her awful past, a "before" picture of her. She then asks, "Would you love me if I were fat?" Her boyfriend Tom, played by Reese Phillip Purser, tries to convince her that he too is not perfect by showing her a scar he has on his pinkie.

Mendy Wood, as Jenny's alter-ego, keeps the audience laughing as she pleads with Jenny for junk food. She looks forward to going to the high school reunion in hopes that there will be a buffet served. When Jenny locks her in a closet she resorts to eating the moth balls.

"Til the Fat Lady Sings" is a comedy that most can learn from. As Jenny finds out in the end, "They liked me just the same as they always did."

FLICK FLACK

The Daily Universe, under the title of "Flick Flack," publishes synopses of movies shown in local theaters and on campus. Movies listed are not necessarily endorsed by The Daily Universe.

AMADEUS (PG) — Story of the rivalry between composers Mozart and Salieri; played by Tom Hulce and F. Murray Abraham. (profanity, vulgarity)

AVIATOR (PG) — Christopher Reeve is an air mail pilot in 1928, taking his first passenger, a rebellious, teen-age girl, over the mountains when his plane crashes. They hate each other, but cling together to survive, eventually gaining mutual respect. (violence, profanity)

MICKI & MAUDE (PG-13) — Dudley Moore stars as Rob, who is happily married to Micki, a lawyer. Rob's having an affair with Maude, a cellist. Micki wants a career; Maude wants a husband, and Rob wants to be a father. Maude finds out she is pregnant and Rob marries her. But he soon learns that Micki is pregnant also. Rob is one man with two wives, expecting two babies. (profanity, nudity)

PASSAGE TO INDIA (PG) — David Lean's epic look at a clash of two cultures in India. The story is slow and deliberate, but vivid with good photography and performances. (violence)

THE SURE THING (PG-13) — A teen-age comedy about a young couple reluctantly thrown together on the road to California. This movie uses the classic formula: Boy meets girl; girl snubs boy; boy gives up on the hope of winning girl and then fate intervenes. (Violence, profanity, nudity)

CLOAK AND DAGGER (Varsity) — Henry Thomas stars as an imaginative youngster who enjoys role-playing with his imaginary friend, a superspy. One day he witnesses a murder and becomes involved in a real-life mystery.

ROCKY I AND III (Varsity) — A curious combination of two of the three sagas about a two-bit boxer who gets a second chance in life. In Rocky I, the "Italian Stallion" is singled out for a bicentennial exhibition match against the great Apollo Creed, who is expected to make mincemeat out of the unknown underdog. Rocky takes things seriously and goes all 15 rounds, stunning the boxing world. Why the Varsity Theater decided to leave out the pivotal "Rocky II" in which Rocky finally wins the coveted title is a mystery, but Rocky III will follow.

Y bands prepare music for 1985 Winter Games

By RICHARD W. IRWIN
Universe Staff Writer

Next week Park City will be filled with ice skaters, speed skaters and ski teams as the town hosts the 1985 International Winter Special Olympic Games.

BYU is very involved with and supportive of the Games, and has encouraged clubs, groups and organizations to be involved, said David Blackinton, director of bands.

Members of the symphonic and wind symphony bands will play several marching numbers while the 800 athletes march onto the seventh fairway of the Park City Golf Course at the opening ceremonies of the Games on Monday.

"Our participation has been in the planning for three years," said Blackinton. "With the university's heavy involvement in the Games, it just seemed appropriate that we furnish the music."

Athletes representing all 50 states and 11 foreign countries will participate in the Games. Gov. and Mrs. Norman Bangerter and former Gov. and Mrs. Scott Matheson are the honorary co-chairpersons.

Another group from BYU, the Young Ambassadors, will perform Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the Egyptian Theater in Park City for the foreign athletes and coaches. "We want to give them a taste of America through song and dance," said artistic director Randy Boothe.

The closing ceremonies of the Games will be in the Salt Palace and feature several performing groups from BYU. The Young Ambassadors, the Lamanite Generation and the International Folk Dancers will perform in a program written and produced by Boothe.

"I was reluctant to take on the volunteer job of producing the closing ceremonies," Boothe said. "But I watched a video tape of the Special Olympics and the athletes. It grabbed my heart strings so I couldn't say no."

Phil Donahue will be the master of ceremonies at the closing ceremonies that will feature Olympic figure skaters Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner, and Olympic gymnast Bart Conners. Boothe said he is confident that with the support of the celebrities the ceremonies will be a big success.

Dinner theater goes to the Excelsior

The ASBYU dinner theater will be presented this weekend in the Excelsior Hotel, featuring Neil Simon's "Barefoot in the Park."

"It will be a white table cloth and red rose affair," said Darren Gillette, a dinner theater committee member. "It is a perfect evening for impressing a girl that you have wanted to take out."

The program is scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. Beef Bourgogne will be served for dinner and the play will be immediately following the meal.

"Barefoot in the Park" is a romantic comedy. "The play is a fine piece; it's terrific and very funny," said Charles Metten, a professor of theater and cinematic arts.

The theater production is Randy King's senior project. "After seeing a rehearsal I think the play will be very good if the hotel will give them time to rehearse," said Metten.

Jeff Havranek, a past Social Office vice president and Leslie Mayo, chairman for the dinner theater, created the program last summer when they were looking for more "classy" events for the Social Office. "There was never anything cultural in the office," said Mayo. "We wanted to combine both the Social and Culture Offices for something other than a dance or Preference. We wanted a classy cultural evening."

Semi-formal to formal attire is required. "It's a fancy affair that we hope will get a big turn out," said Gillette.

Last semester the dinner theater was held in the Wilkinson Center. It sold out the first night and almost sold out the second night.

The tickets are sold in advance for $20 a couple. "It is not a revenue-making program," said Mayo. "In fact we will be losing money, but we wanted to have something nice for students.

"It is better than going to a movie and then just going home. Everybody has got to eat, so why not eat dinner and see a nice theater production."

Baroque trumpet soloist to blow his horn Saturday

Edward Tarr, a world-renowned trumpet soloist and an expert on Baroque trumpet will perform Saturday at 8 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

As a musicologist, his major interest is in reviving early trumpet music on both modern and older instruments and on present-day reconstructions.

In the New Grove Dictionary of Music, Tarr's playing is described as an ability to "cultivate a brilliant and resonant tone on these instruments to match the sound described by contemporary writers."

He is also cited as being an "equally adventurous author and editor who has contributed much to the history of the trumpet and making much Baroque music available for the first time in modern performing editions."

Tarr has more than 80 recordings to his credit and has toured throughout the world presenting his music. He now lives in Switzerland where he teaches at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis and the Basel Conservatory.

Dietician to reduce Parliament

LONDON (AP) — An expert dietician will go to work at the House of Commons to cut some excess pounds off Britain's roly poly Members of Parliament.

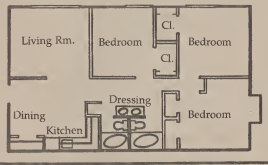

The parliamentary dietician will give advice on low-calorie dishes, says Conservative party lawmaker Charles Irving, chairman of the Commons catering committee.

He criticized a suggestion in a slimming magazine that members of the 650-seat House, many of them regular customers at the Commons' bars and restaurants, "eat too much, drink even more and exercise too little."

"To suggest that MPs gormandise is absolute rubbish," Irving fumed. "This isn't the Palace of Forced Feeding. People have the freedom to choose, as they would anywhere else, and many MPs are expected to go on our low-calorie diet."

Paroled prisoners expected to wear monitored necklaces

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — If a paroled Utah prisoner stops off at the bar after work, a computer will tell his parole officer.

Utah corrections officials hope to have an electronic tracking system in place by week's end for up to 30 prisoners on parole or probation.

Each individual will be required to wear a necklace with a radio transmitter connected to a receiver in the person's home. The transmitter will be tied in with a central computer and set off an alarm each time the individual leaves home, or if he removes the device.

The system will be used for a wide variety of offenders, said corrections Director Stephen V. Love.

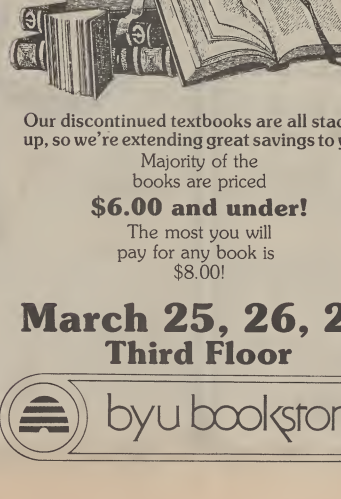

"The people wearing them will run the gamut from Class B misdemeanors to first-degree felonies," Love said. "The system will not stand alone. It must be part of our intensive supervision program."

Individuals on intensive supervision often are released from prison early but receive more extensive scrutiny than other probationers or parolees.

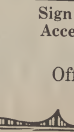

The program has had its share of problems in recent months, but Love said he is confident it will be operational within the next few days.

Despite problems, the Utah Legislature has authorized purchase of an additional 70 necklaces beginning July 1.

1898 Victorian-style building now bed and breakfast house

By JULIA SADLEIR
Universe Staff Writer

The Pullman, a Victorian style home built in 1898, is now the city's first bed and breakfast house. It provides a home away from home for patrons to use for lodging, receptions and small dinner parties.

The facility was bought by the Morganson family in 1984, and they converted it to a bed and breakfast house in December 1984, according to Dennis Morganson, part owner of the house and a former BYU student.

The idea to start the business came from various media reports, such as one by PM Magazine that talked about the growing number of bed and breakfast houses across the nation, Morganson said.

The house has six guest rooms, a dining room, a library and a parlor. Breakfast is served to guests in the morning, he said. "We wanted to make it a very nice home-like atmosphere and a relaxing place to stay."

Many of those who have used the facility have been local residents who just want to get away from home to celebrate a birthday or an anniversary.

The house has also been opened for rental to wedding parties, and dinner parties. "The dinner parties can hold 30 people, and for receptions we have had 400 people come through," Morganson said.

Because of space limitation for dinner parties, the Morgansons plan to expand their facilities in the future by adding a reception center to the back of the house. The same architectural style of the house will be utilized in the new section, he said.

The house was named after a railway car called the Pullman which was attached to trains for people who wanted a luxurious and comfortable ride, Morganson said.

The Pullman house was built in 1889 for William H. Ray, who was once mayor of Provo. The house is on the National Register of Historical Places.

According to Morganson, the bed and breakfast tradition began during the American Colonial period. They were established to accommodate travelers who were looking for a place to stay for a night. Many community residents opened their homes to strangers and offered them something to eat, Morganson said.

During the depression, since motels were hard to find, local people started the business with the intent of economically benefiting both themselves and travelers. Guests were charged $2 a night, he said.

The bed and breakfast house today is very popular in Britain, and in other parts of Europe. It has grown throughout the United States as an alternative to hotels, said Morganson.

These guest houses can be found throughout Utah, including Salt Lake City, Logan, St. George, Salina, Mt. Pleasant and Park City.

39 motorcycle gang members charged with drug violations

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Federal authorities unsealed indictments charging 39 alleged motorcycle gang members in Pennsylvania and New York with drug violations Thursday.

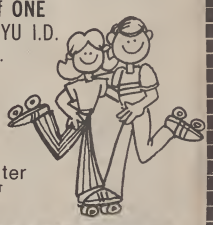

The investigation, begun three years ago, became one of the largest ever undertaken in the region, according to U.S. Attorney J. Alan Johnson.

The prosecutor said the indictments name members of the Pagans motorcycle gang in Kane, Pa., and Jamestown, N.Y., and the Iron Coffins gang in Erie.

The charges include possession with intent to distribute LSD, other hallucinogens, and a variety of common, but illegal, drugs.

Pesky mosquitos ease pollution, but torment man

By STEVEN J. HANSEN
Senior Reporter

If the Environmental Protection Agency had anything to do with pest control, it would probably outlaw mosquito insecticides because mosquito larvae remove pollution from water.

With the snow melting into puddles and streams from spring run-off, mosquito larvae, and plenty of them, are busy at work cleaning up pools of water. Unfortunately, these larvae get their stamina by exploiting people's blood.

The mosquito population is on the rise, multiplying in incredible proportions and making it almost impossible to control. According to Stephen L. Wood, an entomologist at BYU, the large population of mosquitos, not the availability of pesticides, is the most complicating factor in controlling the pest.

To combat the large population, mosquito larvae must be killed before they hatch in their water environment. That translates into any body of water from as large as Utah Lake to as small as cows' tracks filled with water, said Wood. Even a tin can left to rust in an open field can be an inviting habitation for the ubiquitous insect, provided it is furnished with adequate moisture.

Hopes that the water will evaporate before the larvae hatch are vain. Mosquitos breed fast to take advantage of small pools of lingering water. By the time the water soaks into the earth, second generation mosquitos are taking over where their parents left off.

"They've adapted to take advantage of an ephemeral environment," said Wood. "They can complete a cycle before puddles disappear." To be sure not to miss the short, hospitable season to proliferate, mother mosquitos have been planting their eggs since fall in puddles that survived an early freeze. Once the temperatures exceed 40 degrees, the larvae begin a three to four week process before hatching into full-fledged mosquitos.

No pesticide on the market can guarantee ridding an area completely of mosquitos. After a major defensive, mosquitos will return within a week, said Steve Buffo, pest control operator at a local pest control outlet. "The eggs hatch off quite rapidly and most attempts to kill mosquitos do not affect the egg."

Over-the-counter insecticides can only control the mosquito for a short time because they only kill the bug that happens to be sprayed; it does not, however, leave a residual to take care of late comers. Also, the biodegradable factors are so great that the chemical breaks before the time other mosquitos arrive.

There is, however, one hope for Utah County. Buttressed with a $160,000 budget, the Mosquito Control Department of Utah County is equipped to track down the elusive insect. Its primary goal is to stop the mosquito while in the larvae stage with a larvacide.
